On-line Resources of Digital Texts

E-Books or digital texts are in a form that makes adaptation easy. The material can be read aloud through a text-to-speech engine, it could be adapted by changing to a larger or easier to read font, the background color could be changed to make the text more apparent or to improve the contrast. E-books are available from online libraries and bookstores, or can be created from word processors or other conversion programs. An additional advantage of digital text is that the text files can be transferred to palm computers or specialized readers for increased portability and control.

Each of the links below should open in a new window

Alex Catalog of Electronic Texts
http://sunsite.berkeley.edu/alex
Site contains a catalog with roughly 2,000 links of e-texts, located on various servers. And has the additional search ability to search for content phrases and convert documents into PDF format. The Alex Catalogue of Electronic Texts is a collection of digital texts from American literature, English literature, and Western philosophy.

American Library Association
http://www.ala.org/parentspage/greatsites/lit.html
700+ SITES for CHILDREN covering Literature and Language as compiled by the Children and Technology Committee of the Association for Library Service to Children, a division of the American Library Association.

National Academy Press
http://www.nap.edu
NAP's website allows you to search the fulltext of their digitized books. NAP publishes books in the sciences, engineering, and health.

SearcheBooks
http://www.searchebooks.com/
SearcheBooks searches multiple fulltext book sites such as the ones below.

Project Gutenberg
http://sailor.gutenberg.org/
Project Gutenberg is a large collection of public domain texts. As the website explains: "We cannot publish any texts still in copyright. This generally means that our texts are taken from books published pre-1923... So you won't find the latest bestsellers or modern computer books here. You will find the classic books from the start of this century and previous centuries, from authors like Shakespeare, Poe, Dante, as well as well-loved favorites like the Sherlock Holmes stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Tarzan and Mars books of Edgar Rice Burroughs, Alice's adventures in Wonderland as told by Lewis Carroll, and thousands of others... Project Gutenberg publishes an average of one e-text every day!"

Electronic Text Center
http://etext.lib.virginia.edu/uvaonline.html
This extensive project from the University of Virginia includes many texts in the public domain.
"The Electronic Text Center's holdings include approximately 45,000 on- and off-line humanities texts in twelve languages, with more than 50,000 related images (book illustrations, covers, manuscripts, newspaper pages, page images of Special Collections books, museum objects, etc.)"

International Children's Digital Library
 http://www.icdlbooks.org/people/team.shtml

Digital Text Project
http://www.ilt.columbia.edu/projects/digitexts/index.html

Links to great books by Aristotle, Dante, Dewey, Plato, etc. E-text source for academic texts and links to other digital text projects.

Internet Public Library
http://www.ipl.org

Links to childrens and young adult works, including picture books, short stories, myths and fables. Also has links to online newspapers and magazines.

The On-Line Books Page
http://digital.library.upenn.edu/books/

The On-Line Books Page is a website that facilitates access to books that are freely readable over the Internet. It also aims to encourage the development of such on-line books, for the benefit and edification of all. Their index includes more than 13,000 English works in various formats